"I am delighted with this confirmation at the helm of the Group - commented Silvio Angori - in a moment in which we are launching many new projects to keep pace with the rapid evolution of the automotive industry from the point of view of technological innovation and digitization of design and production processes. Among the resolutions of my second mandate, the enlargement of the membership base remains central - essential to gain greater weight in terms of representation and to maximize synergies, also with an opening towards the world of start-ups - which will lead us to organize a series of itinerant workshops in the main automotive districts of our country, to give a wider visibility to the Group and its initiatives and to dialogue with companies in order to know their needs and to share common objectives.

It is also important to continue to collaborate with other industrial sectors supply chains, both to find new opportunities of technology transfer and to work together on the creation of a single 'creativity and innovation district' enhancing the excellencies of made in Italy"
